Minecraft mob vote 2020 date

Minecraft Live 2020 logo. Minecraft Live 2020 was a live event held on October 3, 2020, from 16:00 UTC. [1] Originally, it was planned that the Minecraft Festival, a real-world event similar to the original MINECON events, would take place; However, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, minecraft festival was pushed back to 2022. [1] The live event was streamed on YouTube, Twitch, Facebook and Minecraft.net. Events[edit] Community Pre-Show[edit] There was a 20-minute Community Pre-Show just before the main event, made up of content creators who expressed about Minecraft. Update announcement [edit] Like MINECON Live 2019, there was an announcement about the next big update, in the same way that Nether Update was announced on MINECON Live 2019, with other major updates in the years before. Unlike the last years though, the announcement was held at the beginning of the show. The update that was announced was Caves & Cliffs. Mob Vote [edit] For MINECON Earth 2017 Mob Vote, see MINECON Earth 2017 § Mob Vote. The three options for Mob Voting. The logo of Mob Voting. Mobs from Minecraft Dungeons and Minecraft Earth were voted to be added to Minecraft. For the second time, observers were able to vote for a new mob to be added to the game in a future update. The first time this happened was in MINECON Earth 2017. Each mob received its own video justifying its inclusion. The mobs who were on the ballot were Moobloom, Iceologists and Glow Octopus. [2] Mooblooms would spawn in flower forests and would interact with bees in some way. Ranunkel will also be added. [3] Iceologers would spawn in mountains and fling ice clouds at the player. Glow Squids would spawn in the sea in dark areas, shining them. Their texture would glow like an Enderman's eyes, but not actually emit light. They ended up being the winner. Failing mobs are less likely to be added to the game in the future, but they still have a chance of being implemented in the future. [4] The results[edit] The vote took place in two rounds. The losing mob, Moobloom, was eliminated from consideration in the second round. The winner of the second and final round was Glow Squid. Minecraft Live: Vote for the next new mafia! Choose wisely! - @ Ultraf, October 1, 2020 ^ The Mob Vote is open! You have 20 minutes to choose your favorite: Moobloom, Iceologs or Glow Octopus! Vote now! - @Minecraft ^ Moobloom is out! We're so sorry bees, no new friends for you. It is now a two-mob race between Iceologists and Glow Octopus - and the last round of voting is open... Now! - @Minecraft Join the livestream to cast your vote! Do you remember what happened the last time we asked you to vote for a new mob? I do. Mainly because I haven't slept since Phantom started swooping around in Minecraft. Apparently my insomnia is not a company-wide concern because we will go ahead and let you do it again. Woohoo. Minecraft Live is just around the corner, so it's high time to get all your chickens in a row and decide which mob you want to vote for during our epic livestream. Voting will take place during the livestream on twitter.com/minecraft october 3rd, so be sure to follow us if you want to make your voice heard! Before you get too excited, Jens and Agnes have already shot down the many, many suggestions to add me to the game. It shouldn't matter if all of them were sent at the same time in the same impeccable handwriting, people want more writers in this little game of mining and crafting. Since they refuse to listen to reason, you'll have to settle for picking between a shiny swimmer, a frozen devil, or a flowering cattle. This cold-hearted illager from Minecraft Dungeons thrives in snowy, icy and rocky areas. If you vote for this hostile mob, they will move into the new mountain peaks that tower over the Overworld. Do you really want it? These mountains are so high that the vegetation doesn't grow on them - just spiky ice formations, rocks and snow as far as the eye can see. Iceologists would make these mountains even more challenging as they don't just want to hang out up there. Oh no, when you meet one of them they will fling flying ice clouds at you. Vote for Iceologists if you want to experience hardcore snowball fights with stunning views! Moobloom This four-legged flower is a fan favorite from Minecraft Earth, and pretty much the opposite of the enemy. Rumor has it that if mooblooms move into Minecraft, they will be able to interact with bees, but no one has told me exactly how. It's almost like they want it to be a surprise and they don't trust me. It's just rude as I'm a consummate professional. Do you know how much restraint it took for me to write the move instead of moo-ve right now? Anyway, vote for Moobloom if you want the Flower Forest biome to be more floral than ever! Glow Squid This shimmering sea creature also made its debut in Minecraft Earth, giving me the perfect opportunity to make a surf & turf joke, but I won't, since I've already committed to writing a very serious article™. Let's see some factual facts instead of spending more time on puns, no matter how cleverly written. The glow of glow squid squid comes from a bombshell skincare routine, but actually refers to the way it literally glows, in the same way that Enderman eyes do. While we compare this candidate to existing mobs, I can tell you that they are pretty similar to octopus that are already swimming around in Minecraft. They won't attack players or other units, but their glow is pretty atmospheric. That's probably why they prefer dark bodies of water - the effect is just not the same in an already sunlit ocean. If you want to add more marine life to Minecraft and speed up the alleged octopus uprising, vote for Glow Octopus! There you have it. Three mobs, one vote. Which one do you want to choose? Make your decision and join minecraft.net/live on October 3 at 12 pm ET! Remember, if you want to participate, log on to Twitter, go to twitter.com/minecraft and vote in the poll! Written by Sofia Dankis Published Join Us on October 3rd for our annual Minecraft party! Well, well. It's that time of year again. No, I'm not referring to my annual training. That was last week, and I can assure you that from now on I will make it an affair every two years. Of course, I can only talk about one thing: Minecraft Live! Tune in to October 3 at 12 pm ET on Minecraft.net/live for what the Minecraft Live team is not-so-humbly calling an event that will happen! Hasn't that trailer explained what Minecraft Live is? It shouldn't be. That's what this post is for, supposedly. Minecraft Live is the new version of our annual live show, which has had many names like MINECON Live and MINECON Earth. Why the name change? Would you ask rap superstar and underrated actor Sean Combs aka P. Diddy aka Puff Daddy it? No, you wouldn't. What you'll do instead is tune in to Minecraft Live on October 3th at 12pm ET to get answers to relevant questions about what the rest of Mojang Studios has been working on all year. Will Seanonly and I be there? Maybe. I need to check our schedule. The Minecraft Live team asked me to focus on the actual event, so I guess I better mention what to expect. The most important thing you need to know is that this year's celebration takes place online. Due to the impact of Covid-19, Mojang Studios has delayed minecraft festival until 2022 and will no longer be involved in official community events. Until then, we will bring the party directly to your unit and we have all our usual goodies lined up for you! Join Minecraft.net/live for updates, mob voices, news and lovely banter. Oh, and chickens. Lots of chickens. Written by Sofia Dankis Published Mojang Minecraft has recently become available for PlayStation VR, but soon Mojang will allow players to vote for the next mob on Minecraft Live 2020.
